

Marathon effort

Billionaire Gina Rinehart is setting what can only be described as a cracking pace in Rio.

As the patron of no less than four Olympic sports — swimming, volleyball, synchronised swimming and rowing — she is covering all corners of the South American city and all of the clock enthusiastically cheering on our athletes.

With her right-hand man Hancock Prospecting executive director Tad Watroba in tow, Rinehart — who we can report is even an honorary member of the synchronised swimming team — is braving security, long lines and traffic jams to take in all the action.

Rinehart, looking fit, relaxed and happy, has been spotted all over Rio, but her efforts began way before the Games started, having hosted Aussie athletes at dinners in the outback and given them tours of her mega iron ore mine in the Pilbara, Roy Hill.